

Share your news, photos and calendar events!

Return to Mason Community Page »

Wednesday, April 01, 2009

Backyard Family Garden Project

Contributed By Janet Fahrenbruck-Lynch | Granny's Garden School

West Chester resident Lynn Broderick and her 16 year old son Dillon, are thrilled to be among the 100 families sowing seeds for the Backyard Family Garden Project, a collaborative effort of non-profit groups Granny's Garden School, Turner Farm, Gorman Farm and Grailville. With a $25 registration fee, each participating family receives more than enough compost, seeds, education and plant coupons for a 3' x 10' backyard flower and vegetable garden. Participants are encouraged to share their surplus with nearby food pantries.

Lynn says, "I am excited to see Our Daily Bread on the list of places to take produce. My three children all grew up going to Kid's Cafe, an after school program at Our Daily Bread where they share a meal and craft project with the children downtown. My husband and I donate and help with fundraisers there too." Lynn has already attended two workshop held at Turner Farm to further educate herself about growing.

The Backyard Family Garden Project sponsors include Marvin's Organic Gardens, Blooms and Berries Farm Market, Natorp's and Home Depot. The Backyard Garden Project is the brainchild of both Roberta Paolo, the Granny in Granny's Garden, and Marvin Duren of Marvin's Organic Gardens. Both individuals were independently developing the concept of a giving garden when they decided to join forces and get others involved. To participate, contact any of the collaborating non-profits or sponsors, or visit www.GrannysGardenSchool.com

Sowing Seeds for Neighbors. Lynn and Dillon Broderick of Westchester